YURTS, CABINS & TINY HOUSES IN THE WOODS:

BY CHRISS CROCKET/SUN JOURNAL

The Moose Mountain cabin sits on top of a ridge in Andover. Left: Combs mark the way to the yurt at Frost Mountain Yurts in Brownfield.

CLIFF-THE-GRID JOY

draws visitors to western Maine

BY CHRISS CROCKET

High above the forest floor, a cluster of Off-Grid cabins and yurts dot the landscape, offering a taste of sustainable living without the drawbacks of modern life.

The yurt is a small, round shelter that is easy to transport and put up quickly. It is a popular choice for those who want to escape the hustle and bustle of city life and enjoy the peace and quiet of rural living.

The Off-Grid cabins are designed to be self-sufficient and require little electricity or running water. They are built to withstand the harsh New England winters and offer a cozy retreat for those who want to get away from it all.

The visitors to these Off-Grid cabins and yurts are drawn by the simplicity and beauty of the surroundings. They come to relax, unwind, and enjoy the natural world around them.

The Off-Grid lifestyle is not for everyone, but for those who are willing to embrace the simpler things in life, it can be a rewarding and fulfilling experience.